THE SIR 2027 REQUIREMENT

Does your university as an educational body host events at university that are open to the general public: executive education programmes (short courses for people who are not attending the university, excluding courses like MBA) and/or vocational training?

01 Statement of Evidence

Bahria University's direct answer to the requirement

Yes, both on a programmed basis and ad hoc. During 2025, Bahria University, through its Leadership and Professional Development Centre (LPDC) and its academic departments, hosted executive education short courses and vocational training at its campuses for people who are not enrolled at the University. On a programmed basis, LPDC published a monthly public training calendar of certificates, diplomas and short courses across Islamabad E-8, Islamabad H-11, Karachi, Lahore and the Institute of Professional Psychology, each with public registration contacts, and delivered recurring cohorts. These included the Certified Human Resource Professional programme (Batch 10), an 8-week Certification in Managing Dyslexia, Language Proficiency Certification, the Diploma in Mediation, the Diploma in Accounting and Finance, the Professional Diploma in Clinical Psychology and the six-month NAVTTC Prime Minister's Youth Skills Development Program, in which 30 young people completed vocational training and received NAVTTC certificates. On an ad hoc basis, the University held or publicly offered one-off courses including an international summer school with a separate fee for external participants, a five-day machine learning course for NADRA employees, Primavera P-6 and environmental health and safety certification courses, a 5G and 6G networks certificate course for telecom professionals, a LEGO robotics summer school for children aged 8 to 15, a Certificate in Advanced Education Leadership for school leaders and a Certified Train the Trainer programme. None of these is a degree programme.

02 Evidence and Activity Record

Dated facts and records that substantiate the statement

The record is organised by the two delivery bases in the requirement. Section 1 shows the monthly public training calendar; Section 2 shows programmed courses delivered in recurring cohorts during 2025; Section 3 shows ad hoc one-off courses; Section 4 shows continuity after 2025. Each course is presented with its dates, venue, intended participants, the public call and, where held, photographs of delivery.

4. Continuity of provision after 2025

The records in this section are dated after 2025 and are presented separately as evidence that the programmed offer continues. LPDC's Annual Training Calendar for July 2026 to June 2027 lists open-enrolment programmes with dates, durations, fees and venues across the campuses. The Language Proficiency Program has continued in numbered batches, with Batch 9 classes from 6 July 2026 and Batch 10 registration until 13 September 2026. Other continuing cohorts include CHRP Batch 12 and the LRN Level 7 Certificate in Education Batch 4, both from January 2026.

5. Summary of evidence

The table maps the evidence to the two delivery bases named in the requirement.

Basis	Entries in Table 1	Principal evidence	Figures
On programmed basis	9	Monthly LPDC calendars published from March to November 2025 with 67 listings; recurring cohorts in CHRP, dyslexia, language proficiency and professional diplomas; six-month NAVTTC vocational programme with 30 certified trainees.	1 to 21
Ad hoc	12	Summer schools with separate fees for external participants and professionals; executive training for NADRA; certificate courses in Primavera P-6, environmental health and safety, 5G and 6G, dyslexia, education leadership and data science; LEGO robotics for children; Train the Trainer.	22 to 39
Continuity after 2025		Annual Training Calendar 2026 to 2027; Language Proficiency Batches 9 and 10; continuing professional certifications.	40 to 45

Taken together, the records show that Bahria University hosts executive education and vocational training for people who are not attending the University, both on a programmed basis through LPDC's published calendar and recurring cohorts, and ad hoc through one-off courses. Courses were open to professionals, organisations, educators, parents, young people and children through public calls and registration, and none is a degree programme.
